WHAT RIGHTS DO I RETAIN AS AN AUTHOR?

As an author, you retain rights for a large number of author uses, including use by your employing institute or company. The specific permission from Elsevier. These include:

- the right to make copies of the article for your own personal use, including for your own classroom teaching use;
- the right to make copies and distribute copies (including through e-mail) of the article to research colleagues, for the systematically, e.g. via an e-mail list or list serve);
- the right to post a pre-print version of the article on Internet web sites including electronic pre-print servers, and to provide our information on electronic preprints for a more detailed discussion on these points.);
- the right to post a revised personal version of the text of the final article (to reflect changes made in the peer review process), with a link to the journal home page (on elsevier.com);
- the right to present the article at a meeting or conference and to distribute copies of such paper or article to the delegates;
- for the author's employer, if the article is a 'work for hire', made within the scope of the author's employment, the right to use the article for other intra-company use (e.g. training);
- patent and trademark rights and rights to any process or procedure described in the article;
- the right to include the article in full or in part in a thesis or dissertation (provided that this is not to be published commercially);
- the right to use the article or any part thereof in a printed compilation of works of the author, such as collected writings (including the journal); and the right to prepare other derivative works, to extend the article into book-length form, or to otherwise acknowledge of its original publication in the journal.

Other uses by authors should be authorized by Elsevier through the Global Rights Department (for addresses see Obtain) if you know of any particular needs or requirements.
